Android chrome certificate authority invalid.

Start by opening Chrome and then pressing "Menu." Go to "Privacy" and select "Settings." Then choose "Clear Browsing Data." Check all the boxes on the screen and then hit "Clear." 3.) Change WiFi Connection Try changing the WiFi connection on your device if clearing data and resetting your Time/Date didn't work. Now, one last little bit of information for the sake of clarity. With an SSL Certificate, however, that communication is encrypted and can only be decrypted by the website itself. You may be on public WiFi which is notoriously insecure. The first step in this case is to back up your phone, lest you lose all of the things you have stored on it. Sometimes these apps can interfere with your browser in a way that causes the SSL connection to fail. An SSL Certificate, as you may know, is designed to both authenticate the identity of the website you're visiting - something that is done by the certification authority that issues the certificate and ensures that you know who's on the other end of your connection - and to encrypt all communication between your browser and the web server. SearchClear searchClose searchGoogle appsMain menu I just spent the morning dealing with this. This was on Linux running Apache 2.2. One of the most common problems on Android devices comes in the form of a browser message that says, "your connection is not private." This may be confusing to you because it occurs even on the newest devices with the latest updates and the current OS. I commented out that line, leaving me with # Server Certificate: SSLCertificateFile /etc/pki/tls/certs/myserver.cer # Server Private Key: SSLCertificateKeyFile /etc/pki/tls/private/myserver.key # Certificate Authority (CA): SSLCertificateFile /etc/pki/tls/certs/InCommonServerCA.pem and now it's working on Android again. To do this, go to "Settings" and select "Date & Time." From there, simply activate the option for "automatic date & time." 2.) Clear Browsing Data on Chrome If the Date/Time fix didn't work, you may need to clear your browsing data. They both accomplish essentially the same thing, but at this point, true SSL has been phased out (Android no longer supports SSL 3.0 - its last iteration) and we're really talking about TLS Certificates. Note: Re-Hashed is a regular weekend feature at Hashed Out where we select an older post to revisit. Find a private WiFi connection and see if the Android error is fixed. This is another simple process. How to fix SSL connection errors on Android phones When you get an SSL Certificate error message on your Android phone there are several ways you can go about fixing the issue. Just make sure your date and time are correct. I started out with my ssl.conf containing my server key and three files provided by my SSL certificate authority: # Server Certificate: SSLCertificateFile /etc/pki/tls/certs/myserver.cer # Server Private Key: SSLCertificateKeyFile /etc/pki/tls/private/myserver.key # Server Certificate Chain: SSLCertificateChainFile /etc/pki/tls/certs/AddTrustExternalCARoot.pem # Certificate Authority (CA): SSLCertificateFile /etc/pki/tls/certs/InCommonServerCA.pem It worked fine on desktops, but Chrome on Android gave me err_cert_authority_invalid A lot of headaches, searching and poor documentation later, I figured out that it was the Server Certificate Chain: SSLCertificateChainFile /etc/pki/tls/certs/AddTrustExternalCARoot.pem That was creating a second certificate chain which was incomplete. 1.) Correct the Date and Time on your Android Device This is a simple fix that may solve this Android error for you immediately. The problem wasn't that I had a certificate missing. After that, select "Settings" and then "Backup & Reset." Then click "Factory Data Reset." Hopefully, this guide has shown you how to fix SSL connection errors on Android phones, but in the event that it hasn't we invite you to share your issue in the comments section and we'll try to help you out with it. 5.) Reset your Android Device This is the nuclear option, but if all of the other aforementioned suggestions have failed to solve the SSL Certificate error, you may have to reset your device. If one doesn't work, try the next. Eventually, you'll have the problem corrected. This week we take a look at the answer to one of the questions we get asked the most: How to fix SSL connection errors on Android phones. This is extremely important because, without SSL encryption, all of the communication you're sending to the web page you're visiting is out in the open and can be intercepted or manipulated by a third party. Browsing without a secure connection is never a good idea. SSL is really only the colloquial term for the protocol at this point. SSL stands for Secure Socket Layer, it was the original protocol for encryption but TLS or Transport Layer Security replaced it a while back. Let's Start with SSL/TLS Certificates First a little background. We'll list five possible fixes. It was that I had an extra. It's not a big deal though, here's how to fix SSL connection errors on Android phones. 4.) Temporarily Disable Antivirus If you have installed an antivirus or security application on your Android phone, try temporarily disabling it and then start browsing again.
